

Children Receiving Child Support

DEFINITION

Children receiving child support is the percentage of parents who make child support payments on time and in full as indicated in the Rhode Island Office of Child Support Services system. The percentage does not include cases in which paternity has not been established or cases in which the non-custodial parent is not under a court order because he/she cannot be located. Court orders for child support and medical support require establishment of paternity.

SIGNIFICANCE

Child support is a major part of the safety net for children and families. In 2022, almost one in six U.S. children (12.8 million) received public child support services.^{1,2} Child support provides a mechanism for non-custodial parents (usually fathers) to contribute to the financial and medical support of their children. Child support programs can encourage responsible co-parenting and increase the reliability of child support paid by helping custodial parents locate the non-custodial parent, establishing paternity and support orders, and monitoring and enforcing child support obligations.³

Child support is a critical tool to provide resources for low-income families and can also keep children out of poverty. The receipt of child support payments can significantly improve the economic well-being of children with single parents — child support nearly doubles the average income of recipients living in poverty. Custodial parents who receive steady child support payments are less likely to rely on public assistance programs and more likely to find work than those who do not.^{4,5,6}

While child support is intended to provide financial stability and improve child well-being, it can be an economic hardship for non-custodial parents. Non-custodial parents of poor children are often poor themselves and have limited ability to provide financial support to their children.⁷ Incarcerated parents with active child support orders are unable to pay while in prison and may face legal and financial burdens upon release.⁸ Some families are required to pay child support to the state while their child is in foster care, which is economically burdensome to parents, can delay reunification, and is not cost effective for the state.⁹ Child support systems that encourage relationship building with the co-parent and positive parenting can strengthen parent-child relationships and increase child support payments. Non-custodial parents who pay regular child support are more involved with their children, providing them with critical emotional support and care. Child support has a positive effect on children's academics and behavior and is associated with greater employment and earnings as an adult.^{10,11}

★ As of December 1, 2023, there were 62,841 children in Rhode Island's Office of Child Support Services system, including private, interstate, and IV-D cases (i.e., families receiving RI Works, RIte Care, or child care assistance). Children receiving child support live across all 39 cities and towns in Rhode Island. Forty-nine percent of non-custodial parents under court order in Rhode Island were making child support payments on time and in full.¹²

★ In 2023, the Rhode Island Office of Child Support Services collected $88.5 million in child support, an increase of about $2 million over the previous year. Eighty-five percent ($75.4 million) of the funds collected were distributed directly to families and the remainder was retained by the state and federal governments as reimbursement for RI Works cash assistance, RIte Care health coverage, and other expenses.¹³

★ In Federal Fiscal Year (FFY) 2022, the Rhode Island Office of Child Support Services collected $4.08 for every $1.00 Rhode Island spent on administering the program.¹⁴

★ During FFY 2023, there were 16,037 court orders for non-custodial parents to provide medical insurance and 8,570 orders for non-custodial parents to contribute funds toward medical coverage. About $6.1 million in payments was retained by the state to offset the cost of RIte Care, while approximately $1.9 million was disbursed directly to families to offset the cost of private health insurance coverage or other medical expenses.¹⁵

★ In 2017, the Rhode Island General Assembly passed a law that allows the Office of Child Support Services to automatically file a motion to modify or a motion for relief when a non-custodial parent is or will be incarcerated for 180 days or more. This law also clarifies that incarceration may not be considered by the court as "voluntary unemployment."¹⁶

★ The percentage of children in the Rhode Island child support system with paternity established increased from 91% of children in 2014 to 96% of children in 2015 but has since fallen to 92% of children in 2023.¹⁷

★ When applying for RI Works, RIte Care, or the Child Care Assistance Program (CCAP), custodial parents are asked to provide information on the other parent to the Office of Child Support Services. This information is used to establish paternity (if not already established), and to seek child support payments and/or medical support. For CCAP, parents must provide information on the non-custodial parents for all children in the family, whether or not the child is receiving a child care subsidy (not a federal requirement). Victims of domestic violence can apply for a child support waiver if providing this information could endanger themselves or their children.^{18,19,20}

★ In FFY 2022, Rhode Island had the lowest rate of court orders established for child support in New England (Connecticut – 95%; Maine – 95%; Vermont – 90%; New Hampshire – 92%; Massachusetts – 83%; Rhode Island – 72%). The national average for cases with child support orders established was 87%.²¹

★ In FFY 2022, Rhode Island had the highest case/staff ratio in New England at 712 cases per person, nearly six times that of the lowest state, Vermont (119 cases per person). High caseloads and a low number of full-time staff affects the Office of Child Support Services' ability to establish court orders for child support.²²

Child Support and Rhode Island Works

★ As of December 1, 2023, Rhode Island's Office of Child Support Services system included 3,656 children enrolled in the cash assistance program (RI Works).²³

★ In December 2023, the average child support obligation for children enrolled in RI Works was $407 per month, compared to an average child support obligation of $479 per month for children in non-RI Works families.²⁴ (Calculations for child support payments are based on both parents' incomes, so it is expected that the average child support obligation for children enrolled in RI Works would be lower.)

★ In Rhode Island, only the first $50 of child support paid on time each month on behalf of a child receiving RI Works cash assistance (called a pass-through payment) goes to the custodial parent. The remainder of the payment is retained by the state as reimbursement for cash assistance received.²⁵

★ An average of 318 families received a pass-through payment each month, for a total of $187,107 paid to families enrolled in RI Works in FFY 2023.²⁶

★ States have the option to pass through a part or all of a family's child support payment to families and to disregard this income when calculating the amount of a family's cash assistance benefit. Rhode Island limits the pass-through amount to $50, regardless of the number of children in the household. Some states pass through up to $100 per month for one child (and up to $200 per month for two or more children) and others, like Colorado and Minnesota, pass through the entire child support payment.²⁷

★ More generous child support pass-through policies for families receiving cash assistance provide a greater incentive for custodial parents to seek child support and for non-custodial parents to make regular payments, because more of the child support payment goes to the child. Increased pass-throughs could therefore increase total child support collections, increase custodial family income, and can decrease poverty and reduce the risk of child maltreatment.^{28,29}
